About the Conference

The International E-Conference on Law and Spirituality (ICLS) is an effort to shed light on the intersection of Law & Spirituality. The purpose of this conference is to identify the role and importance of spirituality in making, interpreting and enforcing laws.

Spirituality is the progenitor of ethics and morality which in turn have always provided a context for determining the validity of laws. Development of the legal system, therefore, has imprint of spiritual processes which seeks to promote peace, harmony and conflict resolution in the society. A society could flourish more with amity and happiness where law is in tune with spirituality while more conflicts have been observed in societies where law denies spirituality.

Presence of spiritual processes in the legal system could encourage consensus and fraternity and thus increase respect for law and legal systems. Spirituality has the potential to identify and eradicate the root cause of conflicts.

The purpose of law is justice which should have a greater spiritual quotient. Spirituality aims at “Sarve Bhavantu Sukhinah” which means “may all be happy” and the same should be the aim of our justice delivery system. When judges and lawyers permeate spiritual values with laws, a better society can be achieved.

No law or legal system can exist in silos, devoid of spirituality. Law, divorced from spirituality, superficially addresses the fundamental issues of society, and disregards the origin of societal conflicts.
